Coveredtil26 Toolkit

Medi-Cal Coverage until Age 26 for Former Foster Youth

Background

Each year, over 20,000 youth age out of foster care in the United States. In California alone, that number is between 2,700 and 5,000 each year. These vulnerable youth too often lack adequate supports to navigate the transition to adulthood successfully. For example, they are much less likely than their peers to have health insurance, but tend to have more health care needs due to abuse, neglect, or trauma experienced during childhood. The Congressional Research Service reports that between 35 and 60 percent of youth who enter foster care have at least one chronic or acute physical health condition that needs treatment, and that the significant physical and mental health issues faced by foster children often continue into adulthood.¹

Now, thanks to the Affordable Care Act (ACA), states are required to provide youth who age out of foster care with health coverage until the age of 26. This extension of coverage to age 26 fills a critical need for former foster youth who do not have the same option as their peers to stay on a parent's insurance plan.

While the ACA provision extending health coverage for former foster youth took effect on January 1, 2014, young adults, organizations, and county agencies are still learning about this exciting new opportunity for coverage. To raise awareness about the Medi-Cal extension for former foster youth, Children Now has developed this toolkit which provides sample language and tools for outreach to a variety of audiences, including former foster youth.

Please join us in making sure all former foster youth in California get the health care coverage they need and deserve.

General Audiences

Former foster youth in CA are now eligible for Medi-Cal coverage until age 26

Thanks to the Affordable Care Act (ACA), youth who were in foster care at age 18 or older qualify for free health care until age 26. Former foster youth living in California are covered under the Medi-Cal program. Prior to the ACA, Medi-Cal coverage for this vulnerable population ended at age 21. The ACA's extension of coverage fills a critical need for former foster youth who do not have the same option as their peers to stay on a parent's insurance plan until age 26.

Former foster youth are eligible for Medi-Cal coverage until age 26 if they:

- Were in foster care in any state at age 18 or older;
- Currently live in California; and
- Are under the age of 26.

Former foster youth qualify for Medi-Cal regardless of income.

Help spread the word about this new and exciting opportunity for coverage!

Youth “aging out” of foster care after January 1, 2014 should be automatically enrolled in the Medi-Cal program for former foster youth upon emancipation, with no new application needed. Former foster youth not currently enrolled in Medi-Cal can sign up using a simple, one-page form. Once enrolled in Medi-Cal, former foster youth stay covered until age 26 with no need to reapply each year. To find out more, visit www.coveredtil26.org.

For Youth

New Law Gives Former Foster Youth FREE Health Care until age 26

Thanks to the Affordable Care Act, you get free Medi-Cal coverage in California if you were in foster care at age 18 or older in any state. Having Medi-Cal coverage until age 26 means you can save your money for school, rent, food, and other things you need.

You qualify if you:

- Were in foster care in ANY state at age 18 or older,
- Currently live in California, AND
- Are under the age of 26.

As a former foster youth, you qualify for Medi-Cal no matter how much money you make.

If you “age out” of foster care after January 1, 2014, you should be automatically enrolled in the Medi-Cal program for former foster youth when you emancipate. You do not need to reapply and will stay covered until you turn 26. If you previously aged out of foster care and are not yet enrolled in the Medi-Cal program for former foster youth, you can sign up using a simple, one-page form. Sample Letter to the Editor

You have likely read an article recently in your local newspaper about new health coverage benefits available to Californians as a result of the Affordable Care Act (ACA). Every article or publication you come across that discusses the ACA and health coverage benefits for Californians creates an opportunity for you to highlight and spread the word about Medi-Cal coverage up to age 26 for former foster youth. Here are some tips and a sample Letter to the Editor (LTE) to help you spread the word about Medi-Cal for former foster youth in your community.

Tips*

- Refer to a recent story. Whenever possible, reference a recent article when writing your LTE. Because information about the extension of Medi-Cal for former foster youth is still getting out, you can refer to any article that is focused on the ACA more broadly or one that is focused on a specific event/convening regarding the ACA when writing your LTE. Submitting an LTE soon after an article is published will increase the chances of your letter being published (e.g. response to an article published within the last week).
- Be brief and concise. Letters to the Editor tend to have word limits that can vary between 150-250 words. Make sure your letter is brief and concise to increase the probability of it being published.
- Provide contact information. Provide your contact information (e.g. name, address, phone number, etc.) when submitting an LTE so staff at the newspaper can contact you if necessary. Do not worry, the newspaper will only publish your name and hometown, not your complete personal information.
